7.	How was the Class advertised in the neighborhood?	Posted on the Lochmere.org website, with a follow up email to all of Lochmere; separate email sent to friends and signups from other activities; event posted on Nextdoor.
8.	How did the class go? A brief description	Really well, the room was full with active participants interested in Larry's and Gerri's talks and demonstrations. The materials supplied were of high quality and appreciated. One small problem: the nail gun malfunctioned so the bird houses could not be assembled. Larry, the instructor worked individually with each participant and made sure he/she clearly understood how to assemble the box at home. Everyone said they would and no one seemed upset. In fact, most thanked us for putting this event together. Refreshments were well received too.
9.	Incentives/giveaways if any offered	Every family participating received all the materials needed for their blue bird house, with verbal instructions on how to complete. One teenaged participant received a Green Neighborhood T-shirt.
10.	Any green event guidelines followed?	Participants were asked to bring in their own reusable glass or cup for drinks and many did so. The refreshments were bought from a locally owned and operated bakery. Paper products used with the refreshments were at a minimum. All workshop related communications were done electronically.
